COMPLAINT

This is a claim of declaratory judgment of non-infringement, invalidity, and unenforceability under 28 U.S.C. § 2201, et seq.

COMPLAINT - 1

Plaintiff AIA Engineering Limited (“AIA”) brings this action against defendant Magotteaux International S/A (“Magotteaux”), and allege as follows:

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. This lawsuit seeks to establish AIA’s right to manufacture, import into the United States and sell products alleged by Magotteaux to infringe its United States patent. AIA seeks a declaratory judgment that the AIA products which Magotteaux has accused of infringing its patent in fact do not infringe any valid and enforceable claim, and that the patent is invalid and unenforceable. There is an actual and justiciable controversy between AIA and Magotteaux, and Magotteaux’s conduct has (and continues to) put AIA under a reasonable and serious apprehension of imminent suit. The dispute is therefore properly before this Court.

BACKGROUND

11. AIA is in the business of designing, developing, manufacturing, installing and servicing high chromium wear, corrosion and abrasion resistant products used in cement, mining and thermal power generation industries. AIA provides such products and services both for domestic use in India and internationally. One class of AIA's products is parts of machines or other devices that come into contact with abrasive materials, such as rock or other hard, abrasive substances (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "wear components"). These parts include those sold under the Sintercast mark. These Sintercast products contain portions which are resistant to wear as a result (among other things) of the inclusion of certain combinations of metal oxide ceramics. Vega is the exclusive distributor in the United States of AIA wear components.

12. Magotteaux also produces products which compete with AIA's wear components. For simplicity, these too will be referred to hereinafter as "wear components," even though their composition may not be exactly the same.

13. Magotteaux asserts ownership of United States Reissue Patent No. 39,998 entitled "Composite Wear Component," which reissued on January 8, 2008 ("the '998 patent"). (A copy of the '998 patent is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.) The '998 reissue patent was preceded by U.S. Patent No. 6,399,176 ("the '176 patent"). (A copy of the '176 patent is attached hereto as Exhibit 2.) There are also foreign counterparts to these patents in various other countries, including India and Europe.

14. A dispute has arisen between AIA and Magotteaux regarding whether AIA's wear component products infringe any valid and enforceable claim of the '998 patent. The dispute has its origins, in part, in a joint venture collaboration between Magotteaux and Mr. Bhadresh Shah that began in about November 1990 and continued until its termination in about February 2000 via a Settlement Deed, which formally ended the joint venture and separated the entity now known as AIA under the principal ownership of Mr. Shah. In the most recent manifestation of the dispute, however, Magotteaux has accused AIA of having wear component products that infringe its patents in various jurisdictions.

15. One of those jurisdictions was India. There, AIA challenged the scope and validity of Magotteaux's Indian patent, both in response to an infringement suit by Magotteaux against AIA and via the Indian patent office. Magotteaux has since unconditionally withdrawn its Indian patent lawsuit against AIA, without leave to re-file a new suit on the same subject matter. Further, Magotteaux's Indian patent remains under challenge in the appropriate courts and agencies in India with responsibility for patents there.

16. In the United States, on or about March 24, 2008, Magotteaux filed a complaint before the International Trade Commission ("ITC") claiming that the wear component products of AIA and one other respondent, Fonderie Acciaierie Roiale SPA ("FAR"), infringed the '998 patent. The ITC initiated an investigation on April 25, 2008.

17. In response to the investigation, AIA filed an action in India seeking an anti-suit injunction against Magotteaux prohibiting it from proceeding in the ITC against AIA and Vega. In that Indian action, AIA obtained an ad interim ex parte order barring Magotteaux from proceeding against AIA and Vega before the ITC pending further proceedings in that lawsuit or trial. The order, however, was preliminary and it also did not require dismissal of AIA and Vega from the ITC proceedings. To maintain a position consistent with the Indian anti-suit injunction, AIA and Vega ceased all participation in the ITC proceeding while the anti-suit injunction was being litigated in the Indian courts.

18. Eventually, on or about November 14, 2008, an Indian appellate court dissolved the temporary anti-suit injunction and remanded to the lower court to consider the matter after a fuller presentation of evidence. That ruling of the Indian appellate court was reviewed and upheld by the Indian Supreme Court on December 18, 2008. The Indian action pertaining to the anti-suit injunction and Magotteaux's compliance or contempt of that injunction remains pending in India. However, the removal of the temporary injunction created practical procedural difficulties for AIA and Vega in connection with the ITC proceeding. In sum, while they vigorously contested both infringement and validity with respect to the '998 patent, it became clear that AIA and Vega would not be in a position to fully defend themselves before the ITC.

19. Magotteaux continues to maintain that AIA's wear component products infringe the '998 patent. AIA and Vega continue to dispute this and contend that the '998 patent is invalid and that AIA and Vega do not produce or sell a product that infringes any valid and enforceable claim of the '998 patent. This dispute is on-going and adversely effects AIA's and Vega's business in the United States with respect to those particular products.
